

The Imitation of Christ : The Universal Security State, Freedom and Responsibility

by

E. F. Mische

Contemplate the holographic matrix that you perceive around and in you. Satisfaction is a rare commodity. We are so involved with finding, procuring, processing and if possible storing materials for our physical needs that we find it a rare (and possibly illegal) achievement to venture into the “desert” to ascertain a complete mastery of our existence.

And yet isn't this the story and the promise of Jesus of Nazareth, and in means and permutations the ultimate goal of Physics.

Yes it would be “cool” to be able to have control over nature in biblical proportion.

We could feed the hungry, cure the incurable, raise the dead and have one heck of a day fishing

Application of this ascendant technology would change society with the awe inspiring rapidity completeness of a wildfire. However we ask; Would the technology of Christ always be used for good and whom decides what is “good”. Surely a creature whom is able to change water to wine could after a bad day on the golf course turn the magnificent waters of Lake Superior into plastic polymers.

In a world of 6 billion plus humans we seem destined to always have some miscreant representation in the extremes of the Bell Curve of Human Behavior.

That which Physics can provide us is limited to the surety of responsibility from the citizens of Earth. We cannot individually possess fission reactors in our homes to provide energy for day to day living. If the secrets of fusion would be released to the general public how long before someone vaporizes his voting district. Many if not all potential applications of the higher fundamentals of science carry the possibility of some form of terroristic act which would destabilize large portions of our society.

The non-disclosure and over-arching security blanket that seems to be denying us our “right” to know is the result of responsible actions by people whom understand the thin line that divides us from a verdant stability and ongoing catastrophic disasters. To deny that some actors in this drama gain personally is naïve, every second of the day we are all human and are all challenged by our lack of mythic perfection.

So what is left for humanity as far as Physics goes?

What about the population that enjoys the status quo?

Does everyone have to drink the kool-aid of advanced scientific progress?

As we go into the future those whom elect to and are elected to navigate the endless wonders of the holographic universe will be the New Angels, those men and women that give up the rights and freedoms found in mundane everyday affairs to responsibly act as arbiters of peace and well-being for the meek left behind.

It is the Mind-Belief-Bulk interaction which will be the future of physics, for however few of us which will have the opportunity to actually participate in it.

It is overcoming the hypnotic illusion which keeps us on the treadmill of daily life instead of venturing to a strange cafe, on an unusual planet, in a beautiful galaxy, in an out of the way little universe, and then buzz home in a wink to sleep in your beloved bed.

The pursuit is to actuate the observation that one can find the universe in a grain of sand.

To use the Voodoo Doll Effect for Astrophysical Fun instead of vengeance and spite..

Besides the mind-matrix interfacing and peripherals physicists have the challenge of true artificial intelligence to work on. Not just massive computing but the solving of relations between everlasting, independently existing conceptions which not only provide our existence but created Space and Gods.

Providing all the necessities and desires of all people will eventually lead to a dominant peace and this will be done by understanding these amazing koans, and undertaking the multiplication of goods by manipulation of the hologram we are charmed by.

Tempting fate and having a touch of sympathy for the devil one wonders how the Creator would feel about his children whom loved His Universe so much that they fought tooth and nail to stay engaged in it instead of going quietly into the dark night.

For centuries humanity has been led down false paths, ridiculed, had miracle performing saints abused, and hardworking curious men and women hideously burned at the stake in order to hide the path.

The afore-mentioned pursuits will keep us all busy and happy if Nation and nations clearly outline a determination to achieve these goals as Children rather than usurpers of the Creator.

Aside from mind control we must satisfy the needs of the populace or face continual non-productive turmoil. Physics is whatever a Physicist chooses to do. We must not deny the Creator and we must not ignore the Jesus experience.